

FAREWELL TO OLD MISSION

New Building Will Rise on Jerry McAuley's Site.

The tall Jerry McAuley Water Street Mission, under Brooklyn Bridge, erected in 1872, mainly from second hand material, will be torn down this spring and replaced by a new one to cost about $100,000. Farewell meetings in the old building were held yesterday afternoon and evening, and male converts by the score got to their feet in the course of the meetings to tell how they had come up to there. From bank president down to baseball umpire, these men talked of love and gladness. Each was brimming over with happiness, yet tears were shed.

It gripped the mission folks pretty hard, the thought of losing the old building. One man, a tall, handsome fellow, who was on his way three years ago to throw himself into the river, when he paused to step into the old ramshackle mission at No. 318 Water street, said the place had the most damaging ventilation for bald heads he ever saw, but for him it held hallowed memories. This was about what they all said.

The new mission will be plain looking enough, but it will have fair ventilation and will furnish "screened air" from Water street.

The old benches, "the mercy seats" of Jerry McAuley's time, will be saved and installed in the structure. An electric alphabet on the roof, by means of which gesmessages can be "flashed" to thousands of sick travellers along the waterfront on the Brooklyn and Manhattan bridges, will be installed.

While the new building is replacing the old, the work started by Jerry McAuley will be carried on in the Mariners' Temple, Oliver and Henry streets, near Chatham Square.

ALBANY SOCIETY'S DINNER.

The annual meeting and dinner of the Albany Society of New York will take place in the Hotel Plaza on the evening of April 12. Besides a large attendance of resident members, it is expected that a hundred citizens of Albany will be in attendance.

William H. McElroy will be toastmaster, and among the speakers will be former President Louis Stern, Justice Edward E. McCall, Professor George W. Kirchwey and Carl N. Peabody.

BLIND WORKERS' EXHIBITION. Under the auspices of the New York Association of the Blind, a blind workers' exhibition will be held in the Metropolitan Opera House from April 26 to April 30. A feature will be a demonstration of the work which the New York Board of Education is doing in teaching blind pupils in the elementary and high schools. A corps of special teachers for the blind will show actual schoolroom conditions with their classes.
